COLLINS WINS ANOTHER GRAND PRIX.

Starting before dawn, the 12-hour international sports car race opens a thrilling meeting at Rheims. British Jaguars are early in the lead. The meeting is marred by one tragic crash in which the woman driver Annie Bouasquet is killed.

The first four - all Jaguars! Hamilton and Bueb are the winners. And now for the main event - the French Grand Prix, which counts for the world championship. Moss, Fangio, Behra, and Collins are close contenders for the title - and they're all racing today. So if one of them wins, it may give him a commanding lead for the world crown.

Jean Behra's Maserati making good time - and there's Juan Fangio, the reigning champion, in his Ferrari.

Mike Hawthorn, in a Vanwall.

Castellotti and Peter Collins fight it out in two Ferraris - and it's Collins who streaks ahead to victory by less than half a second! And that gives him a clear five points lead towards the world championship!
