WIMBLEDON MEN'S FINAL:

What a week for Australian sport! For at Wimbledon Lew Hoad, (at the far end) and Ken Rosewall fight for the men's singles title in an all-Australian final on the Centre Court. Hoad wins the first set 6-2, but he's up against a tough opponent in his fellow-countryman and boyhood friend Rosewall and in the second set he has to battle for every point.

Rosewall just manages to take the set, but in the third, the tide turns again. Here's the set point, with Hoad at the near end, leading 6-5.

Hoad leads by two sets to one. And here he is serving for match point.

A brilliant final between two 21-year-olds who seem likely to dominate the Wimbledon scene for some years to come. The Duchess of Kent, President of the All-England Club, comes onto the court to present the Challenge Cup to Lew Hoad. Maybe one day an Englishman will win it - but meanwhile, there's no doubt Lew's a very popular champion!
