

INTERNATIONAL EISTEDDFOD.

Ukrainian peasants walking through the streets of Llangollen can mean only one thing - the Tenth International Eisteddfod is under way. Since the end of the war, this gathering has steadily grown in popularity - and this year brings more than a thousand foreign competitors - dancers, singers, and musicians from countries as far apart as America and Yugoslavia. The main event of the first day are folk music and folk dancing.

The teams don't bother to wait for the competition itself - when they feel like dancing, they dance. and the street's as good a place as anyway.

A colourful group is the Estonian folk dance team, with it's own musicians.