

QUEEN IN THE WESTERN ISLES.

Lord Macdonald of Macdonald introduces his children to the Queen and Duke as they arrive at Nyleskin for their tour of the Isle of Skye. The islanders see a rare event, the Duke himself driving the Queen in an open car, on their way to the capital, Portree - which means, in the Gaelic, "the King's Harbour". It was to Portree that Flora Macdonald brought Benny Prince Charlie on the historic flight "over the sea to Skye".

The royal family lunch at Dunvegan Castle, which has been for centuries the stronghold of the Macleod chieftains. On to Barra, where the Queen meets 87-year old Mrs. Mary Macneil, whose clan settled in Barra nine hundred years ago and built their island fortress. Next day the Queen and her family cross the Little Minch to South Youeast in the Outer Hebrides. Prince Charles looks very grown up, but this is Princess Anne's morning - she's six years old today!"
