

105SF01

56/70.

FRENCH FASHIONS.

In the gardens of Versailles, a summer wind shows off the autumn and winter creations of Jacques Fath to full advantage. Fluidity is the keynote of the season for this famous firm, which is now run by Genevieve Fath since the death of her husband. Her newest creations favour ease and comfort, freeing the silhouette instead of restricting it, and leaving the waist more mature intended.

For this shetland two-piece suit, a short cloak to complete the picture.

Another two-piece - again with leopardskin trimmings.

The lines are classical, but the winter models use white fur, gay embroidery, and every other device to brighten the year's grey days.

But a satin evening dress the envy of every woman, with the figure to wear it, and the pride of every man with a figure to buy it!