SPORTS NEWS:

When Wyeombe Wanderers are at home to the Uganda touring eleven, there are fewer football boots than feet on the Loakes Park ground. The African boys are used to hard earth and on this wet grass most of the play seems to be in the visitors' goal.

Centre-forward Paul Bates defeats goalie Mafutali, who's doing his best in spite of an injured muscle. The unfamiliar ground proves too much of a handicap for the Africans, and before long they've lost count, of the score. Here's Paul Bates landing another one.

Nearly half-time, and according to the experts it's six-nil. Sorry seven-nil.

But in the second half the Uganda team seems to be finding its feet - with or without boots.

Left winger Kalibbala starts an African attack across the Wyeombe goal. Centre-forward Owiti dodges the defence and heads it to Seruwagi - and it's in!

The crowd cheers Uganda's only goal, for the visitors are on the defensive again. Frank Smith clinches it at 10-1.

At Montreuil, near Paris, the stock-car racing season is on again. There are four heats in the start-of-season challenge meeting, and if they carry on in this rock-an'-roll manner there won't be any left for the final - let alone the rest of the season!

Well, this chap's got one less to puncture!

Believe it or not, 22 cars and their drivers survive to the final. And as long as you reach the finishing line, who cares if they have to get you out with a tin-opener?

At Brookline, Massachusetts, Australia's Lew Hoed and Ken Rosewall meet Vic Seixas and Hamilton Richardson of America for the final of the U.S. doubles championship. Rosewall serving.

Richardson's lob is just inside; a point for the Americans. But Australia's top pair are soon putting on the pressure.

Rosewall again - Richardson returns - and it's a two-man duel, till Rosewall finds a weak spot.

The Aussies lead by two sets to one, and Vic Seixas is serving. But time and again the visitors place it between the American pair.

Lew Hoed serves.

And Rosewall drops it neatly out of reach.

Low Hoad again, for match point - and it's a sorecher!

So yet another title goes to Hoad and Rosewall, Australia's world-beating pair. Getting almost too easy, don't you think?
