FARMER GLANFIELD'S PYLON.

A shadow falls across Twelve Oaks Farm, Windlesham - the shadow of a pylon. For the past two years, Farmer Dudley Glanfield has been fighting the Central Electricity Authority about where it should be built; now the Authority has slipped in and built it while he was away on business. And made quite a mess of the field in the process. So Farmer Glanfield declares a state of siege - very strongly defended.

Not that he objects to the pylon itself - in fact, he had proposed a site only 100 yards away, where the cables wouldn't endanger his farm machinery. Meanwhile, any work on the pylon will be over Farmer Glanfield's dead body!
