ORPHAN ANIMALS.

Rhodesian game warden Gerry Taylor and his family keep open house for the waifs and strays of the animal world, like this night ape Mrs. Taylor's nursing back to health, or this mobile pedestrian crossing. Some were found trapped, others deserted by their parents, but the Taylors can always find room for one more.

I think there's one at the back which ought to come out.

And I think that croc ought to be kept on a chain... Star turn of the family is Senny the leopard, nine months old, and most un-catlike in his love of water. He can even turn the tap on. Maybe a leopard can't change his spots, but he can always have a go at washing them off!
