

10-524501
News of the Day
Dec. 6, 1956, Vol. 28-#231

52
ENGINEERS RESCUE
CRASHED BOMBER!

An Air Force C-47 downed in the Arctic wastelands is rescued from an ice-bound grave by a new development of the Army Engineers. Instead of abandoning the helpless hulk, the soldiers place their standard on top before taking it away.

With the aid of a snow-tow train, the giant craft lumbers across the frozen wilderness to its destination. The trip to the nearest repair depot is two hundred miles but the sturdy train is built to take it. No longer need expensive planes be lost to the hostile elements.