

SAUD GETS GOOD
NEWS ABOUT SON!

At Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, King Saud of Saudi Arabia attends to some personal affairs. Saud is scheduled for an eye examination while his aides work out details of a general accord with the U. S.

Wearing a pair of American-made glasses, His Majesty looks in on his son, undergoing examinations for partial paralysis. Ike's physicians have good news to add to hopes for a Middle East agreement. With therapy and braces, Prince Masshur may regain use of his affected limbs. Like any father, King Saud reacts with an affectionate hug, and kiss, for his ailing little son.
