This pup provides the basis of a good story. If you read the enclosed cuttings from today's papers you will see what I mean.

Abandoned and unwanted on Sunday. Now hundreds of folk want to give it a home.

This pup is one of the lucky ones. What about the THOUSANDS who find their way via Battersea Dogs' Home to the long sleep in the gas chamber?

Why not get some shots of this pup when it goes to its new home and contrast these with other shots taken at the Battersea Dogs Home of other lost dogs waiting hopelessly for someone who never comes?

It seems to me that with sympathetic treatment you would get a good story and one which would find favour with hundreds of thousands of cinema goers- particularly if you wound up with an appeal "Can you give one of these lonely dogs a home?"
