

2-052f01

57/29.

MISS GHANA SEES LONDON:

Her name's Monica Amekofia, which means "kingmaker" - a very appropriate name for a beauty queen. Her official title's Miss Ghana, and she's arriving at London Airport for a twelve-day visit to Britain. And who better to show Monica the sights of London than Miss Great Britain, Irish Waller.

In her own country, Miss Ghana is a seamstress - so naturally she would like to visit one of London's fashion houses. Preferably, fashions which she doesn't get a chance to look at in Africa - like this £1,000 mink balero, shown by expert Mr. Deanfield. A little warm for the tropics - but it feels good in London! And now a call at Aspreys - for diamonds sparkle all the world over. And when jewellers display their wares so invitingly, they know what they're doing!

Miss Ghana decides she likes London, indoors or out - and London's glad to welcome a very charming representative of a brand-new country.