

TIGER ABOUT TOWN:

Margarita Nazareva can't be bothered with peedles, pomeranians, or anything small. Indoors or out, she's a catlover - and since you can't have too much of a good thing, she keeps the biggest cat she can find. His name is Purah - and he seems quite at ease in Margarita's home town in Soviet Georgia. Margarita swears he's the friendliest tiger in all Asia; the expression on his face - is just playfulness. The townspeople aren't so sure, and they're quite relieved when Purah and his friends disappear into the local zoo. But no, he's not staying - it's just a visit.

Purah's party manners aren't all they might be.

Perhaps he doesn't like associating with gaelbirds.

Now we know the origin of the phrase "Hold that Tiger". It was the heart-cry of a worried cameraman!
