

MONACO GRAND PRIX.

There's a strong British contingent at the start of the Monaco Grand Prix - Moss and Brooks in Vanwalls, and Collins and Hawthorn in Ferraris'. This three-hour scramble round the houses and hairpin bends of the tiny State is one of the most exciting in the racing calendar - but the top drivers prefer it to other road races because it's better organized and safer for the public. There's Mike Hawthorn's Ferrari well up among the leaders; Juan Fangio of Argentina, and everyone expects a rip-roaring finish!

But at one stroke, British hopes are dashed - a fantastic pile-up near the harbour puts Moss, Collins and Hawthorn out of the race! Brake failure on Moss's Vanwall caused the smash. No one is badly hurt; there's a lucky escape, too for Menditeguy of Argentina, who crashed almost in the same place. Little opposition remains for Fangio, who thunders home with Tony Brooks in second place. So the greatest driver in the world adds yet one more victory to his fabulous total!
