B & K IN PRAGUE

A new line-up of Communist pin-up boys awaits the arrival of the chiefs in Czechoslovakia. The Czechs had to revise the line-up because quite a few Reds bit the dust on the eve of this visit by Soviet Premier Bulganin...and the new, undisputed boss of the Kremlin, Nikita Khrushchev.

Any shift in Moscow seems to be all right with the party line Czechs. The satellite's party leader Novotny says his comrades all approve the ousting of Malenkov, Molotov and Kaganovich - and Khrushchev is happy to hear it!

Next, a traditional ceremony for the important guests - the breaking of bread.

Khrushchev appears in high spirits - and well he should be! Here is a man who has emerged - for the moment - as top dog in the terrific power struggle that has raged since the death of Stalin. The assembled Czechs hear him say, "We had some black sheep in a good flock - and you know how it ended." The man who denounced the cult of the personality is proving an exception to his own rule!
