

LEW HOAD DEFEATED:

Lew Hoad, who quit amateur tennis after his second-running Wimbledon victory, meets the king of the pros, Pancho Gonzales, at Forest Hills, New York. That's Lew at the far end - discovering, for all his brilliance, that the path of a professional isn't strewn with roses.

And now it's Hoad serving again. The blond Australian isn't perturbed, and he scores some wonderful points - but he's got a hard fight ahead of him to reach the same dominance in his new sphere as he did in the old. This time, big Pancho is just too good for him - but the champion says: "I'm sure Lew Hoad is going to be one of the all-time greats".
