NOWHERE TO GO.

At Chertsey, in Surrey, there's a caravan site where 200 families live. Most of the men are essential workers at places like London Airport or Vickers-Armstrong. Mr. Richard Mann, who owns the site, had plans to make it a model caravan estate - but now these 200 families are faced with eviction. The Ministry, the County Council, and Chertsey Council have refused to allow them to stay - even they all own their caravans. For this is part of London's Green Belt. Right next door is a licensed caravan site; but the County Council decides it is time to call a halt. Our interviewer calls on Mrs. Stanley, wife of a hospital technician, to discuss the problem.

And the answer? An anonymous Council employee gave it in three words! "More flippin' 'ouses!".
