U.S. TENNIS SINGLES:

In the U.S. singles final at Forest Hill, New York, Louise Brough meets thirty-year-old Althea Gibson (at the near end) who proves she's still in the brilliant form which won her this year's Wimbledon title. First set goes to Althea 6-3, and here she is pelishing off the second set even faster. Just watch that action!

Set point for Althea - Louise serving.

And that's it! Althea Gibson becomes the first of her race to win the American singles crown. A double record - for she was the first at Wimbledon, too.

Next, the men's singles. Malcolm Anderson and Ashley Cooper - once again, it's an all-Australian final.

Cooper serves. He's seeded no.1. No it's natural for him to be here - but Mel Anderson's a surprise - he wasn't even on the seeded list. But it's an even bigger surprise when he outplays the great Cooper.

Anderson serves for match point - and Cooper's defeated! Never before has the singles title been won by an unseeded player!

Vice-President Nixon hands the trophies to Althea Gibson and Mel Anderson, congratulating them on their achievements. And the crowd adds it own applause for the two first-timers who have made tennis history!
