

TENNIS HISTORY MADE
IN U.S. SINGLES!

At Forest Hills in New York, Althea Gibson and Louise Brough take to the court. Miss Gibson has already made tennis history winning the coveted Wimbledon title in July. Today, in the near court, she is polishing off her opponent in straight sets for the US Singles championship. At the age of 30, reaching the pinnacle of tennis fame. Watch the action...

Brough serving. It's all over. Winning 6-3, 6-2, Althea Gibson becomes the first of her race to wear the National Singles Crown.

Next, the men's singles. Malcolm Anderson and Ashley Cooper in the all-Australian final.

Cooper serves. He's top seeded in the tourney. Anderson is unheralded, but reaching the peak of skill and power on the famed court around the world from his homeland.

Anderson serves at match point. That does it. Batting the second ball out of the stadium, he's jubilant in triumph.

Vice President Nixon presents the trophies - to Miss Gibson and to Mal Anderson, first unseeded player to win the US Singles. Truly one of the historic hours in tennis,
