

CHARLIE HILL K.O.'s JIMMY BROWN:

When Jimmy Brown (in the striped trunks) challenges Charlie Hill for his British featherweight title in a Nottingham fight promoted by Bag King, all the experts are predicting an easy victory for the Belfast challenger. And the first few rounds don't give them cause to change their minds. Hill's on the defensive, with Brown forcing the pace all the way; and once or twice the champ looks glad of the bell.

Hill's right eye is out, and there's even talk of retirement - but when the bell goes again, the champ's on his feet and ready for more. It's round nine, and this is where Charlie Hill of Cambuslang starts to show the stuff that champions are made of.

Brown's fighting back - but there's new life in the Scottish boy, and the experts are starting to think again.

Round ten coming up - Brown's still ahead on points, but now it's Hill' who's making ent punning.

And now Hill's hammering into the Belfast boy - Brown's looking groggy - right, left, right....

And that's it! The man who couldn't lose is flat on the canvas, and the crowd's cheering itself hoarse!

Nine, ten, out! Charlie Hill is still featherweight champion of Great Britain - and unlike the famous fight in Belfast last year, when chairs and bottles flew, not even the hardest critic can say there's any doubt about it! A fighting champion who deserves his crown!
