

CONSERVATIVE CONFERENCE:

The last of this year's great political conferences brings the Conservatives - like Labour the week before - to Brighton. Foreign Minister Selwyn Lloyd and Defence Minister Duncan Sandys arrive together at the conference hall, followed by Miss Pat Hurnsby-Smith. The bravest literature-seller wouldn't try selling information to Dr. Charles Hill - that's his own province.

Mr. Walter Elliot arrives with Mrs. Elliot, conference chairman - and a lady with a message gets moved on.

Lady Dorothy Macmillan and her son Maurice walk from their hotel - and there's President of the Board of Trade Sir David Eccles.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Peter Thorneycroft, pledged to keep the pound on its difficult upward struggle - and new Party Chairman Lord Hailsham, with Lord Woolton. And here comes Mr. Harold Watkinson, Minister of Transport and Civil Aviation.

But one voice will influence the conference which is not that of a delegate!
