

5/97.

IKE STARTS A SCARE:

A military transport brings the King of Morocco to Washington - and waiting to greet him is President Eisenhower. No one - least of all, Ike himself, knows that within an hour or two he will be ordered to bed. On this cold morning, few notice the little hesitations in his welcoming speech.

Soon after this State event, the wires are humming round the world - and Ike's illness starts a wave of alarm, Morocco is only one item on his packed agenda. Can Ike stay on the job?