

ENGLAND v. IRELAND:

It's 30 years since Ireland beat England, and the English have won their last 17 internationals; so when the boys in green meet white-shirted England at Wembley they've a tough job on their hands. The battle sweeps into the visitors' goalmouth - but they're saved by the crossbar. A near one, that!

Derek Kevan comes in again - but Tommy Taylor misses an open goal!

Danny Blanchflower receives - Johnny Haynes tackles - it goes loose, but Danny gets it back.

Billy Wright tries to stop an attack - for the first time in an international, there's a penalty against him. Jimmy McIlroy takes the kick - and scores off the post!

So Ireland are one up! Now Haynes sends a long pass to Alan A'Court, last-minute replacement at outside left.

A'Court crosses the ball - Taylor beats Harry Gregg - off, and that's another near one!

Second half, and here's Kevan passing to Alan A'Court, who slips it past Gregg and there's the equaliser!

England are soon on the move again - but Ireland are ready this time, and before you can say "Begorra", McCrery's landed a beauty!

England 1, Ireland 2 - and there's no stopping the Irish now. Within minutes, they're pressing hard, on the right wing.

Inside to McCrery, who shoves it out again...

Simpson heads - and it's in! England appeal for offside, but the goal's allowed. England 1, Ireland 3!

England fight to close the gap - a lovely shot by Kevan is headed out. Not many minutes to go and it's now or never. Bryan Douglas pulls a smart one back to Duncan Edwards - who bangs it home! But Ireland hang on to their lead, and England's 30-year-old run is broken!
