

GRUB A LA CARTE:

Mr. Charles Orr-Basing, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for Air, presents the Jolliffe Trophy to Wing-Commander G.W. Emery, C.O. of Digby R.A.F. Station. No, it's not a tea-umm - but it might well be; it's awarded every year for the most attractive and efficiently-run R.A.F. airman's mess in Britain. One look at the menu should be enough to prove that Digby have earned their trophy. Mr. Orr-Basing joins the queue - and you're lucky to be seeing any pictures, because our cameraman's mouth was watering so much he could hardly keep his camera steady.

Ha!
Oh!
Ah!
Oo-oh!

No, it's not a put-up job, the Jolliffe Trophy is awarded after a surprise visit by the judges, and it's Digby's boast that this fabulous menu is typical of what they've been putting on for the airman for the past year. The Trophy's been going since 1942, and Digby won it with the highest marks ever. And the menu certainly gets full marks from the Erks!
