

CANADA'S FIRST NOBEL PRIZE:

New Zealand's Sir Leslie Munro congratulates Lester B. Pearson on being the first Canadian to win the coveted Nobel Peace Prize. Many other Commonwealth and foreign guests are at this big dinner party given on "Lester B. Pearson Day" by Toronto, his native city. After a speech in which he calls for serious talks between the United States and Russia, "Mike" Pearson (as he's known to his countrymen) receives a presentation silver jug from the City Council. There's a presentation for his wife, too - a photograph of herself and her famous husband. And for Mrs. Pearson Senior, a portrait of her son receiving the Nobel Prize in Oslo. A great day for one of the world's leading Elder Statesmen.
