

GOLDEN GLOVES BOXING:

At the Golden Gloves tournament in New York, the amateurs make up in fighting spirit what they lack in skill. Haymakers fly thick and fast when Walter Moll, the black trunks, mines it with Steve Maicrano. Watch Moll deliver a beautiful belo punch - just a little short on range.

Maicrano chases him back, and floors him with a winner. Spensered by the New York News welfare fund, the Golden Gloves centest certainly gives the crowd its money's worth. Now it's Richard Rockman (dark trunks) and Frank Beggs throwing everything in the book at each other - plus one or two not in any book. Rockman forces Begg round the ring - and if this is a welfare show, it's not Mr. Begg's welfare Mr. Rockman's thinking of.

Beggs is trying hard to fight his way back, but they both run into straight lefts, and that's Begg's lot. The referee decides it's enough - Oh well, it's tough at the bottom, too!