

SPORT IN U.S.A.

They mark the scales in ounces at the U.S. Naval Academy when these sons of the sons of the sea dish out the haymakers in the Navy's Small Fry Boxing Championships. From the sidelines, their proud papas cheer them on - perhaps some of them started this way themselves, for the Small Fry tournament has been a major event on the U.S. Naval calendar for 39 years.

In the White Shirt - Gunboat Bill, up against Submarine Pete. No quarter given or asked - their gloves may be almost as big as themselves, but they sling them around like conkers on a string. And this is one time when it really hurts Dad more than it hurts Junior. Who'd be a parent?

Who'd be a ref!

Over to Syracuse, New York, where the American Bowling Championships are undre way for prizes totalling over a third of a million dollars. We'd like to stay long enough to tell you who wins, but we can't spare a cameraman for ten weeks solid - and that's how long it's taking to weed out the 28,000 hopefuls from 39 States of the Union, plus Hawaii, Canada, and - don't ask we why - Saudi Arabia. Looks an easy way of earning a third of a million, doesn't it?
