

CANCER CONGRESS SPECIAL

To the Royal Festival Hall, London, come representatives of 63 countries which are permanently at war with a common enemy - cancer. The Seventh International Cancer Congress brings together some of the finest scientific brains in the world. Their President - Sir Stanford Cade, K.B.E. C.B., greets them as they enter the Hall for discussions which, they are confident, will bring them a step nearer the day when their battle will be won for good.

Two nuns from Texas are among the representatives from Church medical organisations.

Dr. H. Lokkerbol from Amsterdam, with Dr. F.K. Mostofi from Washington, Dr. G.R. Scott, from Ontario. They will all be making their contribution during the reading of more than 200 papers on aspects of cancer research and treatment.

Dr. Quintana Mayuga from Chile with a lady colleague - Dr. E. Ming, from Australia.

Time for the opening ceremony - which is to be performed by the Duke of Gloucester, representing the Queen, who is Patron of the Congress but who is, of course, in Scotland at the moment. His Royal Highness welcomes the delegates and wishes them success in their discussions.

After the Duke, the President Sir Stanford Cade - one of Britain's outstanding surgeons and a leading figure in the cancer campaign.
