

DUTCH OPEN JUDO SCHOOL:

What goes on in there, was the question on every young shaver's lips at Bloemendaal. Too bad for those who were on the outside looking on. It was opening day at the new Judo School. The sport's caught on quite a lot in Western Europe, and Holland isn't lagging behind. As it originated in Japan, the Japanese Ambassador was invited to inaugurate the school. Judo is a sort of mixture of old-world politeness and near-assassination.

The major formalities over, the mat was clear, and it was Let Battles Commence. Judo's grand for the younger generation; AND they can get even with those delinquent parents.

Half the secret, evidently, is those threatening noises. Imagine yourself Khrushchev, and your opponent's half beaten before he starts.
