

WINTER HITS FIVE STATES.

Cincinnati has the worst floods anyone can remember. A sudden thaw, plus torrential rain, swamped the Ohio valley. And not only the State of Ohio, four others have severe flooding; Pennsylvania, Indiana, New York and West Virginia. Altogether, 25-thousand people are homeless; damage already tops 30-million pounds.

As if the floods were not enough, the mercury dropped again. Business life in several towns nearly came to a standstill. There was no public transport, and as for folk who'd left cars out overnight, they often hadn't the heart to start digging them out. The stock of one second-hand dealer was iced up, inside as well as out.

In warren, Ohio, the river didn't stay away from the supermarket's door, and what a mess it left behind. Countless packets of middy detergent, to be swept up. Use Muddo. Only Muddo washes your whites really black....This time there was nothing to pay at the desk.
