

NEW SMOG MASK,

A girl from outer space? No, she's an earth-type wearing the latest from Paris - a smog mask, imported by the Daily Sketch. The contraption caused something of a sensation when demonstrated in London. A tiny spirit stove on the side of the mask heats and cleans the smoggy air as it passes through a pipe and a fan (driven by a small battery) keeps up the circulation. Then all you have to do is breathe.

An ideal device for nagging women. It's a pity you have to wait for smog to use it. There are, of course, disadvantages.

Smog can't harm her, and there's no need to starve to death, that is, if she stays on a liquid diet.
