

SCOTLAND V. WALES, (RUGBY)

Fifteen hopeful Welshmen - backed by 20,000 supporters come to Murrayfield to do battle with Scotland. Wales kick off (they're in the lighter shirts) - and at first it looks as though they may repeat their victory over England. Early Scots attempts to break through are smothered.

And with only four minutes gone, Wales are storming towards the Scottish line - and Malcolm Price is over for a brilliant try!

Terry Davies converts - also brilliantly. But now the tide begins to turn - and the Scottish pack get the ball away time and again.

McLung to Stevenson - on to Weatherstone...but the attack failed.

Just before half time, Ken Scotland takes a penalty for the home side - and with inches to spare makes it 3-5.

Now the battle's really warming up, and the Welsh have their backs to the wall.

Gordon Waddell picks up in the loose. Waddell to Norman Bruce - and he's over with a slam that knocks him unconscious! But when he comes to, he finds he's put Scotland in the lead! And although Wales do their best in the second half, the tough and speedy Scottish pack are just too much for them.

There's plenty more excitement - but no more score. Scotland hang on to that one point lead - and not even 20,000 disappointed Welshmen can deny they've earned their victory!
