

GOLDEN GLOVES A KNOCK OUT!

The Inter-city Golden Gloves championship was fought in Chicago. Bout of the night was the light-weight encounter between Vincent Shomo (Dark trunks) and Freddie Davis who's Chicago's own champion. Davis made all the running in round one but Shomo showed skill in riding most of the punches when he was on the ropes. He has a big reputation in New York, his speciality - a dynamite left hook.

Freddie Davis won the first round by a big margin. No sign so far of the New Yorker's vaunted left hook, but Shomo's instructions were to be more aggressive. He waited for his chance, unleashing some hefty digs and Davis had to clinch to keep out of trouble.

Shomo failed to follow up his advantage, so the Chicago boy was back in the fight. He landed first in a brisk exchange. Shomo was back on the ropes, but apparently unworried. A split-second opening, and there goes that left-hook! Davis was out to the world. Shomo is lightweight king of the Golden Gloves!
