

1,000 HONEYMOONERS GET TOGETHER.

When you see five hundred honeymoon couples all at one time, you know it's Spring and it's any odds you're in Jersey. The gem of the Channel Islands has always been a favourite resort for newlyweds. For the goodly proportion of the couples at honeymoon hotel, only the best of everything was good enough. So as soon as they were all in the dining room the management saw to it that the best was ready and waiting. Honeymoons are looked back to as quite idyllic, or else you think, if only I'd known,. However, in Jersey nobody was feeling cynical. Everybody toasted everybody else, Good luck, and happiness for life.

You never saw so much happiness as simply beamed from every window. Who cared a hang if Jersey blotted her copybook and it just poured with rain?

At various hotels there were altogether 500 young couples starting married life. The Jersey authorities gave a ball in their honour at the West Park Pavilion. Nobody asked for a Paul Jones.

After the ball was over they were all a bit tired and with finely assumed nonchalance made for quarters far from the madding crowd.
