

FLOODS HIT HARD IN SOUTH AMERICA!

Swollen rivers leave dismal trails of death and destruction in three South American countries. In Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay, people in flooded communities wait for the waters to recede so that they can move back to their marooned homes. At least 29 are dead, and hundreds of thousands have had to flee to higher ground. Buenos Aires, capital of Argentina, is particularly hard hit. Here alone a hundred thousand are homeless. There is fear of epidemic from infected food supplies. But, though vaccines are rushed in, emergency food deliveries must be made regardless of precautions.

A proud capital in the throes of hardship!
