

MAU GROOMS SUCCESSOR.

Chinese in Peiping and throughout the country led by Mau Tse Tung himself, went to the polls to elect his successor as Chief of the State. Also voting was Tibet's Panchen Lama, a hundred percent puppet of the Red regime. Mau is remaining as head of the Chinese Communist Party. The new Chief of State is Liu Shao-Chi, but he will not hold complete power while Mau Tse Tung lives. That may not be for long, as Mau is reported to be suffering from cancer of the liver. But the people didn't know that, when these pictures were taken, and joyously celebrated the election result. That, of course, had never been in doubt; true to Red-election form, Liu Shao Chi was the only candidate...