

AUCKLAND OPENS NEW BRIDGE.

Auckland people walked over the new harbour bridge for the first and last time, just before it was officially opened. After that, it was strictly vehicles only. Thousands saw the Governor General, Viscount Cobham inaugurate the bridge, a great event commemorated by a plaque. Auckland, New Zealand's biggest city, has dreamed of this bridge for a hundred years. Now, with four traffic lanes, it's an accomplished fact, something the whole Dominion is proud of.

It cost $6-million, and it'll save a long detour; a big benefit to a city of half a million people.
