

JOCKEYS AID INVALID.

It was a very special ginkhana at Hill Lays. There was Pat Moss (Stirling's sister) with Hanky Panky. Brian Marshall had charge of Sperty Boy, and there was all kinds of fun of the sort that goes down well on these occasions. Eight riders who've all won the Grand National formed the day's star attraction. They were going to be seen in action later on. Dick Frances was one, Fred Winter was another. Dave Dick...Brian Marshall again...And Mike Scudamore. The Ginkhana was called the Sally Haynes Show. And a few miles away, enjoying the sun at Stoke Mandeville Hospital, lay the girl on whose behalf the show was held. Sally is 18. Last May she had a bad accident at a point-to-point, so friends hit on the idea of the ginkhana to raise money for her.

Back to Hill Lays. Pat Moss in good form on Hanky Panky.

Now for the top spot on the programme. The Unique Jumping Competition, for Grand National winners only. They all gave their services for the good cause, and Fred Winter was the winner. Not satisfied with that, Fred and his friends rode in the Donkey Derby. To win fame at this game you really have to be able to ride, because any donkey worth his salt - or - oats, has a mind of his own.

There was no stopping Fred Winter that afternoon. Bless if he didn't win again. What a pity it was that Sally Haynes didn't see it all. May she soon be in the saddle again.
