In the small Dutch villages the hula-hoop is still:going strong. At Zweeloo, in the Northern part of Holland Max, 4-years old dog, did not like it at all when Dineke, his special friend, became fond of the hoop. She had no more time to play with him.

There was only one thing to do for Max: to learn how to hula-hoop himself. When Max found the wheel-rim of an old bicycle one day, he immediately began to train. Without anybody's help he succeeded in mastering the art of hooping. Now it's his special hobby; the other animals on the farm don't believe their eyes.

Hawaii may have its famous Hula-girls; this little Dutch village proudly claims to possess the first and only Hula-dog in the world!
