

DUTCH QUADS YEAR OLD.

Callers galore came to congratulate the four most famous people in Northern Holland. They're quads, one year old today. Four babies all at once aren't the rarity in Britain that they used to be, but in Holland these quads were the sensation of 1958. Now they're in the news again. They had presents and birthday greetings from all over the country. One baby is a joyous family affair; twins excite the neighbourhood; quads almost belong to the nation. A year ago they were in incubators - touch and go whether they'd all survive.

First class medical attention and nursing brought them through, and now there aren't four bonnier babies in the whole of Holland. With quads there simply isn't time to apply the window test. Still, they'll soon pass that stage, then Father will only have to think about School Fees.
