

BAUDOUIN AT GOLF.

Not even the famous Gleneagles course can boast royalty every day of the week, so the presence of King Baudouin partnered by Dai Rees, made it quite an occasion. He entered as B. de Bathy, but everyone in the amateur-pro foursomes tournament knew him to be the King of the Belgians. But golf is a great leveller, and not even the skill of the Ryder Cup captain could prevent the pair being knocked out in the first round. They were vanquished by C.H. Scott, of Deven, and his partner, N. Sutton.

The King and Dai were beaten but not disgraced, losing by no more than two-and-one. Every amateur can learn a lot from a player like Rees, so it made a very enjoyable day's golf.
