

BIRD MAN TRIES AGAIN.

With Flight Lieutenant Angus MacDonald, Eriel Hartman prepared for another towed-flight in the Ornithopter. He hopes before long to make it fly, propelled by flapping wings, powered by his arms and legs. Gliding tests in tow will teach him exactly how all the controls behave. He was soon airborne, but found a slight cross wind a bit tricky.

To right the plane, Hartman cast off the towrope. Even so he hit the ground rather heavily. He was unhurt. The only damage was bent struts. Sponsored by the Daily Mail, Hartman will persevere.