

DUSTMAN SHOWS TRUE COLOURS.

At first sight Maurice Rose isn't exceptional, round Hampstead way. A young man with an ambition to be a first rate artist - what's so different about that? Just this: Maurice is a dustman. For regular wages he gives a service and gets rid of the end products of housekeeping. And the strange thing is, he's a dustman out of choice; to get to know people and so become a better artist. Judging by his one man exhibition his theory looks like working out. He's sold several paintings some for as much as £40., like "STILL LIFE WITH RUBBAGE". To fellow artists he explained what he was aiming at in another work, "GEORGE AND DANNY". The moral is, be polite to the garbage man; some day he may be so prosperous you won't see his Rolls Royce for dust.
