

SKI TIME'S HERE AGAIN.

The snow-clad Bavarian Alps beckon winter-sports fans to the Zugspitze. It's powdery snow so far; but good enough for ski-ing. And what a combination; sport, scenery, good company, and everything that a high class hotel can lay on. For this time of the year it's just about a perfect holiday. Two's company - three's a snowman.

The only thing wrong with ski-ing is that everybody has to start as a beginner.

Conditions approved by the experts, they held the Zugspitze Slalom Championships, women first.

Austria provided the winner (the girl who's going fastest downhill in these parts) Christl Machek.

Now the men's race; a test of skill, strength and stamina. The winner, of course, is the one who completes the run in the quickest time, without knocking the posts over or sitting down on the job.

By a split second, the 1954 runner-up in the world slalom championship Berni Obermuller, was the winner.
