

NARRATION

The nation welcomes back its President!
Arriving at Andrews Air Force Base near Washington, Ike gets an affectionate welcome from his wife.

Mr. Eisenhower, looking happy and showing little sign of weariness after his epic trip to three continents, is in good voice.

CHEERING CROWD...Folks thank you very much ...to all of you everybody, everywhere.

Crowds with sparklers line the route to the White House -- as brilliant a greeting as the President met anywhere abroad and, because he's home again, far more heartwarming. Actually, in point of physical fact, it's cold -- as Mr. Eisenhower picks the coldest day of the year in Washington so far for his return -- but the outside temperature has little to do with feelings.
Accustomed as it is to arriving celebrities, Washington still manages something special for the President.
