

PREMIER SEES KARIBA

The new Kariba Dam almost vies with Victoria Falls as a tourist attraction in Rhodesia. The Prime Minister, like all who see the great work, must have felt great admiration for the vision and engineering skill of those who brought it about. The dam will eventually supply the Rhodesias with vast power.

The lake impounded by the dam is filling up, but it may take as long as ten years before it reaches the capacity intended. Africans have joined with white men in constructing this modern triumph in the heart of Africa, a region unknown to Europeans 100 years ago. Kariba left Mr. Macmillan with an unforgettable impression, as he flew on to Nyassaland.
