

MORROCO; KING BACK AFTER TOUR.

Rabat, Capital of Morocco, turned out in force to welcome King Mohammed, on his return from a tour of Arab countries. A big proportion of the 160-thousand population left their ruler in no doubt as to his popularity.

The cavalcade from the airport ended at the royal palace, and from there the King rode to the Mosque, to give thanks for his safe return. He had visited Egypt, Jordan and Iraq, to discuss the possibility of a United Arab front. Everywhere he found indignation over the French Atom Bomb, and one of his first actions now was to recall his envoy from Paris. Whatever his standing abroad, King Mohammed seems to be very secure at home.