

ELVIS QUIT'S ARMY.

The most publicized soldier since Napoleon - er - Elvis Presley (with girl-friend Priscilla Beaulieu to see him off) was leaving Frankfurt at the end of his army service. So it was farewell to military glory, and to 16-year-old Priscilla. What fame for that girl; to have been a friend of the Emperor of Rock and Roll.

At Fort Dix, New Jersey, newsmen, TV and Press, the lot, told the world how Elvis came marching home. For 17 interminable months the cats hadn't seen him. What a price to pay for national defence. But he was home at last, Nancy Sinatra at his side, and the Pelvis was all set to take up his career where he laid it down, to keep the enemies of Uncle Sam on their side of the Curtain. And, have you noticed, we don't hear half so much talk of that Cold War nowadays.

One o'clock, two o'clock, three o'clock - quiet everybody, Elvis is going to speak to the nation:
