ELECTION RUMPUS,

Anybody who thinks elections are just a matter of voting had another think coming at the Chelsea College of Science and Technology. They'd finished the voting; now came the initiation. Successful candidates for the Executive of the Student's Union got the full treatment, and before long they must have wished they'd lost the election, not won it.

Not wanting to keep all the fun to themselves they went on a procession through the streets. The police were out in force to see that the public got fair play. The best way for the public to make sure of that was to stay at home.
