

V.I.P. SEES STUDIOS.

The Oscar Wilde film was being shot at Elstree - Peter Finch in the part - when General Habis Majali visited the Associated British studios. Colonel Jumean accompanied him. On another set was being filmed SANDS OF THE DESERT, which perhaps made it seem a bit more like home to the commander-in-chief of the Jordan forces. He has been the guest of the government and now, attended by Colonel Jumean, he is having a look round. In an Elstree desert it's not surprising to meet Charlie Drake, though perhaps there aren't many like him in Jordan. However, the film-making possibilities of that gallant little country are obvious, so perhaps the General will renew some Elstree acquaintances in his own country in the near future.
